

What did you learn
from this experience?

Did starting from such basic components hurt or hinder your creativity?
Why or why not?

Think about a character from a media franchise you are familiar with. How does this experience change your perception about the creation of that character?